My self-care declaration

I promise to:

I will remember to:

At all times, particularly in times of stress or uncertainty, I will:

I will try my absolute hardest to:

I will choose kindness. Always.

Self-care toolkit: What tools are in yours?

Your Emergency Self-Care Plan

Headspace: www.headspace.com

I find their blog articles incredibly insightful and they aid reflection.

Living Life: www.lltff.com

I've used the CBT modules many a time, and will continue to do so.

Samaritans: www.samaritans.org

I'm not ashamed to admit that I have called the Samaritans before and wouldn't hesitate to do so again - for a dose of empathy and advice in the darkest of times. Lifesavers.

I'm Alive: www.imalive.org

7 Cups of Tea: www.7cups.com

For the times anxiety has made using the telephone a really scary thing to do, I've used these sources of online support and they've been incredible. Lifesavers.

Self-Compassion: www.self-compassion.org

I am getting much better at practising self-compassion and find that reading this website helps me strive to be better at it. Always a work in progress, right?!

Thrive Global: www.thriveglobal.com

Don't we all want to thrive? I dip in and out of this website a lot as I love learning and reading other people's perspectives on some of the problems I face.

Quiet Revolution: www.quietrev.com

It took me years to realise that one of the reasons I didn't feel as though I fitted in was because I was an introvert with lots of extroverted friends. It's been liberating to learn about introversion and how schools, etc are biased towards extroversion.

Calm: www.calm.com

My go-to meditation and mindfulness app. I love that the recordings address the difficulties that we may have when we begin meditating - I don't find it easy at all and Tamara totally lets me off the hook for that which means I embrace the quiet and solitude with very little beating myself up going on.
